

Professor, Tufts University, USA

Ujjayant Chakravorty is a Professor of Economics at Tufts University and Fellow at the Toulouse School of Economics and CESifo. He co-edits the Journal of Environmental Economics and Management and is an associate editor of the Journal of Economic Dynamics and Control. His research focuses on fossil fuels, clean energy, and water resources, with current work on electricity in rural India, groundwater markets, biofuel mandates, and deforestation. He has taught at the University of Alberta, Emory University, and the University of Hawaii. His research has appeared in top journals, and he holds a PhD in Resource and Environmental Economics from the University of Hawaii.